The ancient region of 'Shrutakal' resides upon the banks of the river Ganges located halfway between Delhi and Haridwar, its history is glorious as this is the place where the great king Pariksit fasted until death and this is the place where a great spiritual personality narrated the Bhagavatam.

'Srimad Bhagavatam' means the beautiful (srimad) pastimes of the lord (bhagavan) it describes some of the lilas which have taken place throughout this and many other universes and as the sages gathered to hear these pastimes they eagerly anticipated the coming of the great narrator of the Bhagavatam.

Village people were unable to appreciate his presence as they followed him and saw only a naked madman, but as he approached his destination their astonishment rose as one by one the most powerful kings on planet earth and the greatest ascetics all bowed down in reverence.
