

Already in 1930 Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati had written in his famous "Putana" article: "The churches have always proven to be representatives of the most gross forms of worldliness. The former intention of these established churches (religious institutions) may not have been always doubtful, but we see that no religious institution was successful in spiritually uplifting the masses. Indeed, the idea of an organised church marks the end of a living spiritual movement."

Hare Krishna Centre - Leicester, UK - The End of a Living Spiritual Movement

Written by Srila Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvati

Friday, 25 December 2009 13:55 - Last Updated Wednesday, 06 June 2012 08:26

---